FOREWORD

This directory will save money and time for the man who is advertising or selling goods by mail. In mail promotion, there are three factors: the goods, the printed matter which sells them, and last, and most important, the list of names to which the printed matter is mailed. To those who are selling by mail merchandise appealing to the public in general, the hunt for mailing lists at a reasonable price becomes all-absorbing. If suitable lists must be compiled or bought from list houses, the expense of promotion is very much greater than if full advantage can be taken of the vast amount of material of this kind which is already in book or pamphlet form.

This book is the result of several years' personal search for printed mailing lists and it is offered to the mailing public in the belief that very few realize the immense number of lists which are available in printed form either at a very low price or at no cost at all. The volume tells where to secure such lists, and the approximate price, and gives many valuable suggestions for securing other lists which if followed, will very materially reduce the cost of selling.

Care has been taken to make as accurate as possible the information contained herein, which in nearly all cases has been obtained direct from the publishers mentioned.

W. S. T.

HOW TO USE THIS BOOK

This directory is in two parts. Part I consists of a list of books and pamphlets in which mailing lists are found, and these books and pamphlets are arranged alphabetically under general subjects, beginning with "Accountants." Sometimes there is only one book under a subject, sometimes several, and sometimes a large number. Each of these books or pamphlets contains at least one mailing list, some of them contain several. For explanatory purposes these may be called "Constituent Lists." In general, of each book or pamphlet there is given the exact title, a list of the constituent lists therein, how often it is published, its price, and the name and address of the publisher.

Part II is an index to Part I, a complete list alphabetically arranged of the constituent lists contained in the books and pamphlets mentioned in Part I, opposite each item in the index being the page number of Part I on which will be found described the book or pamphlet in which the constituent list appears. Part II should be consulted first when any particular list is desired, and on the page indicated will be found full information in regard to the book or books in which the desired list can be found.

The expression "book or books" is used because it is quite often the case that a certain desired list may be found in not only one but several books at different prices. In a case of this kind the possible present and future usefulness of the additional lists found in the different books may be taken into consideration before purchasing.

Many suggestions will be found throughout Part I for securing at a small cost books or pamphlets in addition to those actually listed. Often when searching for mailing lists a single suggestion serves to start a search which may result in the securing at low cost of lists containing thousands of suitable names.

A careful scanning of the volume, page by page, will result in opening many new lines of research. The full usefulness of the volume may not be apparent at a glance, it must be kept at hand for frequent consultation. There is probably no one who uses mailing lists for whom it will not save its cost many times over.

EDUCATIONAL

Professors, Assistant Professors, and Instructors in colleges may be obtained from the yearly catalogues of the various colleges, which in nearly every case will be supplied gratis on application to the registrars.

The catalogues also contain the names of all other officers of the colleges, as well as the complete list of students with home and local college town address.

Teachers of town and city schools can usually be procured by addressing the superintendent of schools. Most towns and cities print a folder or pamphlet giving the entire personnel of the local educational organization which is sent free on request, or for a small price, to all whose purpose is a worthy one. For names of superintendents of schools see the Educational Directory, published by the U. S. Department of Education. Teachers of county schools can be procured by addressing the county superintendents of schools. Practically all counties issue printed lists of teachers, which may be obtained on application, either free of charge or for a small sum. Names of county superintendents will be found in the Educational Directory mentioned above.

The names of many thousand teachers can be obtained from the two sources above.

Names and addresses of graduates of colleges for both men and women may in many cases be obtained gratis by applying to the registrars of the colleges wanted. Some are distributed gratis, some are sold for a moderate amount, and some cannot be obtained at all by the general public.

The World Almanac and Encyclopedia

Accompanying the names of almost every organization listed in this book is the name and address of the secretary. These may be written to with a view to obtaining the complete list of members which in many cases makes a valuable mailing list. Some organizations will sell or give away their list to anyone who asks it; some will sell or donate the list for a worthy purpose; some will not or are not allowed to permit the list to pass out of their hands under any circumstances. In writing them, make absolutely clear exactly how the list is to be used.

CITY AND COUNTY DIRECTORIES IN THE UNITED STATES

City Directories contain the names and addresses of people residing within a given district, and in addition a great deal of miscellaneous information useful to those who advertise by mail. There are lists of city, county, and state officials, municipal departments, banks, churches, cemeteries, schools, societies, and miscellaneous organizations of all kinds. Care should be taken to use only those which are up to date. Some are published every year, some every two years, some every three years, and others only spasmodically.

County Directories contain names and addresses of farmers, with assessed valuations as well as all other people residing within the county.

Opposite each Directory in the following list are two numbers. The first tells the name and address of the publisher, which may be found by consulting the corresponding number in the list of City and County Directory publishers immediately following this list of Directories. The second number is the publishers' price of the volume. It is quite likely that owing to advances in the cost of labor and materials some of these Directories may now cost more than the prices quoted.

Get a mailing list and go after that weak spot on your sales map. Bolster up the territory that is slipping; develop business in hard-to-get-at places; pave the way for your salesmen.

With a good mailing list and the Multigraph you can do these things—get out letters, folders, circulars, booklets, mailing cards, enclosures, and the like, that will bring more business and increased profits.

Multigraph equipment for form-typewriting and real printing, with printers' ink, ranges in price from $215.00 to $765.00. Easy monthly payments. Sales offices in all principal cities.

Send for free booklet, "Follow-up Letters" or "Chalk Talks on Form Letter Writing"

Every direct-mail advertiser should read

The Mailbag

It's Tim Thrift's magazine. Full of stunts and schemes and helps for direct-mail advertisers. It prints nothing that isn't usable and practical. Its single aim is to tell—and show—ways of solving problems, using short cuts and getting things done, that have been worked out or discovered by the best brains in the direct-advertising field.

The Mailbag isn't made by one man. It couldn't be, and be what it is. But it is edited by a man who knows direct-mail advertising, and who knows the men who are most successful in the field.

A dollar won't empty your purse, but it will bring The Mailbag a year—twelve issues. The next issue is a good one to begin with.
